

Waterbury Public Schools

Promote Positive Behavior

Positive Behavior Support programs in the Waterbury Public Schools continued this year with many activities for students of all grade levels.

Elementary aged students had an opportunity to spend some time with high school students at Crosby, Kennedy and Wilby. Activities varied at each school and included tours of the school, ice cream socials, face-painting and games.

Students also visited Kennedy High School - even meeting the Kennedy Eagle!

Students from feeders schools also visited Wilby High School and enjoyed a fantastic field day (not shown)

The events proved to be a treat for both elementary and high school students.

About 1,000 elementary school students had a fun day at Quassy Amusement Park - enjoying the rides and free food as a reward for their good behavior all year long.

Quassy owner George Frantzis personally greeted every student as they arrived, congratulating them on their good behavior. Quassy was one of the event's sponsors.

Middle School students enjoyed a hip hop performance.
